

Trip Planning

Going on a trip? You won't want to miss this training. In Trip Planning, you will learn how to work with girls and adults to plan and carry out meeting-time trips, day trips, overnight trips, extended trips, and international trips. Learn about council policies for troop travel, money earning, emergency procedures, accommodations, travel resources, and much more. This class is recommended for groups planning trips of three or more nights, or that are greater than 250 miles (one way) from home. The last hour of the class will concentrate on international travel.

On-line Leadership Training

New Leader Basics, Girl Scout Daisy, Brownie and Junior Grade Level Leadership are available in on-line versions. If you have completed Getting Started/Orientation and would like to complete any of these sessions on-line, please contact your membership director. You will be mailed a paper booklet to use in conjunction with the on-line course. You will also be required to participate in an evening conference call to complete the course and get your remaining questions answered.

Home Study

This at-home paper study program is offered for Basics, Girl Scout Daisy, Brownie, and Junior Grade Level Leadership training. Candidates must have completed Orientation before registering for the Home Study option. You may request this option from your membership director. A workbook will be mailed for you to complete and return for correction.

Community-Based Adult Education

Many community-based organizations, community colleges, and universities offer workshops and training classes which support delivery of Girl Scout program and working with girls. Check your local library, newspaper, community center, or neighborhood school for information about these adult education classes.

Girl Scouts of the USA Courses

GSUSA regularly offers courses at its adult education facility, the Edith Macy Conference Center, in Westchester County, New York. A list of courses offered each year is available from the Director of Adult Development at the council office. GSUSA may offer financial assistance for travel expenses.
